IN THE CELLAR

Vinification: a) Vinification of fresh grapes for the production of Valpolicella Classico Superiore: hand harvested, the grapes are de-stemmed and pressed. Then, berries and must are put into special wine tanks, where selected yeasts are inoculated to start and carry out the alcoholic fermentation.

This strictly takes place at controlled temperature (24-25°C) to extract only the best parts of the berries, namely the fruitier components of the skins and only the delicate ones of the seeds.

b) Ripasso technique: this new Valpolicella Superiore then macerates with fermented vinasse of withered grapes that was previously used to make Recioto or Amarone.

This way, the wine becomes much richer in scnets and aromas so it cannot be called only "Valpolicella Superiore" anymore, but the "Ripasso" mention must be added.

Filtration: The wine is only partially filtered to allow for a more complete expression of all varietal aromas of the grapes.

Any natural sediments in the wine are a further proof of its genuineness
